HGTV.COM SPOTLIGHTS "GREEN HOME" DESIGN BY LOCAL DESIGNER KIMBERLY GRIGG

Green Home In Myrtle Beach Is the Featured "Weekly Tour" On HGTV.com's Popular "Design Happens" Blog

August 27, 2010, Myrtle Beach, S.C. — The "Weekly Tour" feature of the popular HGTV.com blog "Design Happens" is devoted to a "green design" by Kimberly Grigg, owner of Knotting Hill Interiors. The article includes several photographs along with a description of Grigg's innovative approach to designing an eco-friendly home. Grigg is known for her "green" designs, unique children's rooms, and her ability to make any space comfortable and functional.

The HGTV.com article outlines the steps Grigg took to make the family's home more green and energy-efficient. Grigg included a special foot pedal sink to conserve water flow, used low VOC paint throughout the home, and used many materials made from re-claimed wood. She even designed a mantel made from uprooted tree roots and wired the garage for electric cars. HGTV.com was so impressed with Grigg's transformation of the home that it approached Grigg about featuring the home on "Design Happens."

"HGTV is the premier resource for people across America looking for design ideas, so it's a real honor to have my work spotlighted on HGTV.com," said Grigg. "I specialize in designing homes that reflect the people I'm designing for. The family who owns this home is very concerned about the environment so I was able to seamlessly weave ideas for 'green decor' into their home and achieve environmentally-conscious elegance."

"Design Happens" focuses on design trends and innovative designers such as Joshua Foss, who was recently on the HGTV show, "Design Star." The feature about Grigg's design can be found at <http://blog.hgtv.com/design/> .
